A DEADLY ASSASSIN. A CURSED GIFT. A PRINCE SHE WAS NEVER MEANT TO LOVE.

At the Red Fear, the most exclusive brothel in the kingdom of Argevin, there is something more dangerous than the men who pay to indulge their darkest fantasies: Kasdeya, the deadliest woman in the realm.

No one has ever seen her face and lived to tell the tale. Raised on the streets and cursed with a gift that turns every drop of her bodily fluids into a deadly poison, she has learned that getting close to anyone always comes at a price.

When a mysterious client offers her an impossible mission—to seduce and assassinate the king of Argevin—Kasdeya agrees to infiltrate the royal court disguised as a foreign noblewoman competing, alongside other young ladies, for the hand of his son, Prince Keir. Brilliant, arrogant... and irresistibly charming, Keir soon becomes far more than another target. What begins as a game of deception threatens to become the greatest obstacle to her mission.

But the palace is rife with enemies, conspiracies, and secrets far more dangerous than she ever imagined. As the lies deepen and the shadow of Nectumbra—a deadly disease embodied by the mysterious Andras—falls over the kingdom, Kasdeya must decide what is truly more lethal: the poison running through her veins... or the feelings she never should have developed for the one man she was never meant to love.

Nash has mastered the art of going unnoticed—or at least he wishes he could. Painfully shy and impossible to miss because of his height, he moves through high school convinced that invisibility would make life easier. Everything changes when he meets Eleonor, the vibrant founder of The Free Friend Club, a safe haven for students who feel like outsiders. Warm, fearless, and endlessly optimistic, Eleonor believes everyone deserves a place where they can truly belong. Little by little, she encourages Nash to lower the walls around his heart and discover that vulnerability can be a source of strength rather than weakness. As friendship blossoms into something deeper, both must confront the fears they carry, the wounds they hide, and the courage it takes to let someone truly see you.

When Astrid is sent to a remote boarding school, she never expects to end up somewhere so isolated. Surrounded by the endless dunes of the Egyptian desert and cut off from the outside world, the campus feels more like a prison than a school. And her classmates are more than just rebels: some hide deep wounds, others harbor dark urges. As Astrid desperately searches for a way out, she realizes something isn't right. The entire school is steeped in an obsession with Ancient Egypt: statues of deities, enigmatic rituals, hieroglyphs carved everywhere. It's the Anubis group that unsettles her the most. Mysterious, silent, and bound by traditions no one dares to question, the Anubis seem to guard an unspeakable secret. Among them is Seth, the one everyone fears: enigmatic, unpredictable, and dangerous. Astrid can't stand him, and the feeling appears to be mutual. But when a terrifying truth begins to surface, she realizes Seth may be the only one who can help her. Trapped in a place where myth and reality blur into one, Astrid must navigate not only the rules of the boarding school, but also the unfamiliar feelings awakening in her heart... and the darkness lurking within herself. Because sometimes, before you can escape, you first have to understand what you're running from.

What if a child remembered a life that was never his? When Alicia accepts a position caring for baby Rafael, she expects the usual challenges of looking after an infant. Instead, she becomes increasingly disturbed by the child's inexplicable fixation on a particular street, an apartment building, and objects he should have no possible way of recognising. As Rafael's obsession deepens, Alicia is forced to confront an impossible question: how can a baby remember places and people he has never encountered? Dismissed by those around her and caught between reason and the unexplainable, Alicia begins an investigation that uncovers hidden lives, forgotten tragedies, and secrets that refuse to remain buried. The closer she comes to the truth, the more she realises that some mysteries transcend logic—and that the past may never truly let us go. Blending literary elegance with psychological suspense and subtle supernatural elements, The Inexplicable is an immersive novel that explores memory, identity, grief, and the fragile boundary between the rational and the extraordinary.

COMING-OF-AGE STORY

SELF-DISCOVERY

EMBRACING OF SEXUALITY

EMOTIONAL VULNERABILITY

RICHLY ATMOSPHERIC AND EMOTIONALLY RESONANT, THE NEED TO LOVE IS AN UNFORGETTABLE COMING-OF-AGE NOVEL THAT CAPTURES THE EXHILARATION OF YOUTH, THE COMPLEXITY OF HUMAN DESIRE, AND THE BITTERSWEET REALIZATION THAT THE PAST CONTINUES TO SHAPE WHO WE BECOME.

Rome, 1987. Young aspiring writer Martí Rocamora arrives in the Eternal City determined to write a novel about Beatrice Cenci, the Renaissance noblewoman whose tragic fate made her an enduring symbol of beauty, rebellion, and female resistance.

But the city has other plans.

Drawn into the intoxicating world of an enigmatic couple, aristocratic soirées, and the seductive freedom of a generation determined to reinvent itself, Martí finds his carefully mapped future slipping beyond his control. As passion blurs into obsession and buried fears, guilt, and long-forgotten wounds begin to surface, he is forced to confront the question at the heart of his journey: is he searching for a story—or for someone to love him?

MIGRATION

A DEEPLY EMOTIONAL DRAMA ABOUT MUSIC, LOVE, AND LOSS, SPANNING DECADES OF PERSONAL AND HISTORICAL TRANSFORMATION.

From the late 1990s to the first year of the full-scale Russian-Ukrainian war, Key of G follows Kharkiv musicians Semen Shteyngart, a violinist, and Inna Kholodina, a pianist. Their connection, formed during their conservatory years, evolves into a bond far deeper than friendship. Set against a backdrop of music, humour, conflict, secrets, and separation, the novel traces how love and ambition endure—and fracture—across time, distance, and upheaval.

VAMPIRES. A PRINCE WHO IS BOTH HIS GREATEST ENEMY—AND HIS GREATEST TEMPTATION.

Ren's life is everything he could have wished for: devoted friends, loving parents, and a promising future in athletics. But in a single devastating moment, everything is taken from him. Kidnapped from his world and sold to the enigmatic Master of the Games, Ren is thrust into the Kingdom of Infeijin—a realm where the sun has never risen, vampires reign supreme, and the twin moons are worshipped as living gods.

For humans, survival is a privilege, not a right. Determined to reclaim his freedom, Ren refuses to accept the fate imposed upon him. His defiance soon places him on a collision course with the heir to the Iron Throne of Ferin—a ruthless vampire prince whose authority is as undeniable as the dangerous attraction growing between them.

As political tensions rise and ancient powers awaken, Ren will discover that the greatest battle is not only for his own freedom, but for the future of an entire world. And the choice he makes could change everything.

HEARTBREAKING, HOPEFUL, AND PROFOUNDLY MOVING, THE BUTTERFLY EFFECT IS AN UNFORGETTABLE ROMANCE ABOUT SURVIVING ABUSE, HEALING THROUGH LOVE, AND LEARNING THAT EVEN THE SMALLEST ACT OF COURAGE CAN TRANSFORM A LIFE.

Alexandre has learned to survive by always leaving a window open. Behind the closed doors of his home waits a violent, alcoholic, and deeply homophobic father—a man who has taught him that safety is fragile and happiness never lasts. Every day is a battle to remain invisible. Everything changes the day he collides with Jamie. One look into Jamie's golden eyes awakens a forgotten childhood memory, setting in motion a chain of events neither of them could have imagined. As friendship slowly grows into an undeniable love, Alexandre begins to believe that another life might be possible. But escaping the past is never easy, and some wounds refuse to heal without a fight. Together, Alexandre and Jamie must confront fear, family, and the painful cost of freedom, discovering that love is not a destination but a series of choices—each one capable of changing everything, like the beating of a butterfly's wings.

WORLDS ON A COLLISION COURSE, DARING TO BELIEVE IN A HAPPY ENDING.

"When it's just the two of us in this room, the world outside ceases to exist. Everything else fades away. The only thing that matters is what we have in here."

Nolan has only one goal: to become a professional rugby player. Every training session is a challenge, every try a step closer to the dream that consumes him. He is willing to do whatever it takes to make it. Then, on what should have been just another summer night, one wrong moment puts his future at risk and changes the course of his life forever.

That's when he meets Gabe. Thoughtful, reserved, and full of secrets, Gabe is everything Nolan isn't. Between them lies a gulf of differences and distrust. A gulf neither of them should ever cross, yet one that soon becomes the battlefield for a relentless war between hatred and desire.

But the harder Nolan tries to push him away, the deeper Gabe slips beneath his defenses, shattering certainties he once believed unbreakable. Because Gabe is more than an irresistible temptation. He is the truth Nolan has spent so long searching for, and now he frightens him more than any rival he has ever faced on the rugby field.

Caught between impossible promises and unspoken truths, Nolan finds himself trapped in the most dangerous game of all: love. And unlike rugby, this is one game he can't win on his own.

A HIGH-STAKES ROMANCE WHERE AMBITION, OBSESSION, AND DESIRE COLLIDE.

Lea Gessi lives on a knife's edge. By day, she is a brilliant financial consultant. By night, she is a daring camgirl, carefully maintaining a fragile web of lies built with determination and precision.

Everything begins to crumble when Trevor Baker bursts into her life. Charming, dangerous, and irresistible, Trevor is a shrewd businessman whose fortune has been built on ventures, many of them illegal.

Captivated by Lea's exceptional financial skills, he offers her a position at the Italian branch of his company, but she turns him down. What Lea doesn't know is that you simply don't say no to the Wolf of Wall Street. Her defiance sets in motion an unstoppable domino effect.

Lea's secrets cannot withstand Trevor's relentless persistence for long. He believes she holds the key to unlocking an almost limitless fortune. As their shared appetite for risk draws them ever closer, so does the dangerous attraction between them, as relentless as the consequences of the choices they make.

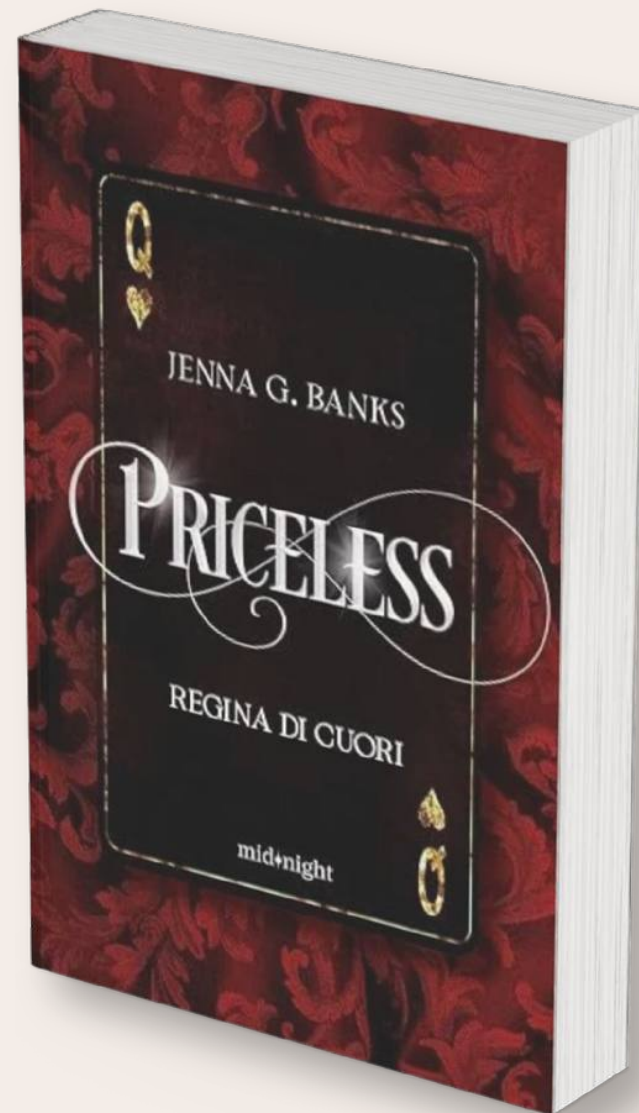

When international crime enters the game to claim its share of power and the past comes calling, desire is no longer a temptation. It becomes a threat. Trevor and Lea no longer measure the value of their lives by the money they make. The passion that binds them is the only thing that matters. But love comes at a price, and some debts can only be paid in blood.

WHEN THE WORLD CREATES MONSTERS, THE

There are no perfect apocalypses. Each one creates monsters.

Lea knows that better than anyone. She knows what pain can do when it can no longer find an outlet, how it can turn into something lethal: cold, calculated cruelty.

She has lost too much. She has waited long enough.
No more games.

The Volkovs are making their move, and Lea and Trevor can no are ready to be unleashed, and no one will be spared. The thin line between enemies and innocents, the guilty and the victims, is about to disappear forever.

This is the dawn of the Domino Effect.

Lea's rage doesn't burn. It incinerates. She feels no remorse for the chaos she unleashes.

The world may bend, but she wants to break it.
And this time, there will be no heroes to stop her.

"YOU'RE IMPOSSIBLE, LU. EXTRAORDINARY. LIKE THE ENDLESS REFLECTIONS OF A PRISM."

The Roccaforte name is more than an inheritance. For Christian, it is a life sentence, a shadow that follows him everywhere, bringing only chaos and destruction. If his family is a storm threatening to consume him, his friends, Kylian, Ryan, Sophie, and Sole, are his only safe haven, the only place where he can still breathe. But every balance is destined to break.

When something shifts between Christian and Sole, when their friendship begins to crack under the weight of an attraction too powerful to ignore, nothing is ever the same again. What binds them becomes something visceral: fierce yet fragile, capable of wounding, poisoning, and, at the same time, healing. A love that defies every rule, challenges every certainty, and threatens the fragile balance of their group.

Yet, despite everything, Christian and Sole continue to orbit one another, trapped in a dangerous dance neither of them can escape. Until life confronts them with its greatest test. Something that could destroy them forever. And then, only one choice remains: become each other's downfall... or risk everything to become the only salvation they have ever known.

Why this Book?

A genuinely distinctive magic system with thematic weight. Emotional memory becomes physically visible on the body, turning every scar into both evidence and vulnerability. The magic is inseparable from the novel’s central conflict: a society built on suppressing emotion versus the radical freedom of allowing people to feel, remember, and choose for themselves.

Key Selling Points

A standout magic system: emotional memory is literally written onto the body, making the scars both a source of power and a record of personal truth.
A strong commercial romantasy framework: rivals-to-lovers tension, dual love interests, elemental fire-and-ice dynamics, fated bonds, political intrigue, and forbidden power.
A politically charged desert fantasy: competing kingdoms, religious control, royal succession, and a society built around the suppression of emotion give the story a broader speculative dimension beyond the romance.

THE PITCH

Ambra Mousaví is a Nazír — an interrogator for the Ministry of Emotional Surveillance in Samhara, a theocracy founded on the belief that emotion is dangerous. Her gift allows her to read “scars”: marks that emerge on the skin, gold or black, recording the emotional truth of everything a person has experienced. It has made her indispensable to the regime she serves — and has taught her to spend a lifetime reading everyone else while burying her own truth, including an illegal second power she can never afford to reveal.

When a routine prisoner exchange goes violently wrong, Ambra discovers that her prisoner bears no scars at all — a physical impossibility — just moments before the exchange is ambushed and she is dragged across the border into the rival kingdom of Ar’Zahara.

There, she finds herself caught between a destabilizing magic system, a royal conspiracy to remove an unfit heir, and two men who could expose everything she has spent her life concealing: Majid, a magnetic and secretive fire-wielder who may be the man fate has chosen for her, and Darius, the warm, steady soldier who wins her heart by choice.

As political loyalties fracture and the truth behind the scars begins to surface, Ambra must decide how much of herself she is willing to let be seen — in a kingdom where power, love, and freedom are all controlled by someone else.

Why this Book?

A highly commercial New Adult romance built around universally relatable questions of identity, independence and finding your own path. Combines romantic tension and humour with a meaningful self-discovery storyline, giving the book emotional depth beyond the central love story. A compelling New York setting adds an aspirational, internationally recognizable backdrop. The romance is driven by strong reader-friendly tropes including slow burn, forced proximity, banter and he-falls-first

Key Selling Points

Strong commercial positioning within the international New Adult romance market. Highly marketable romantic tropes: slow burn, forced proximity, banter and he-falls-first. Emotionally resonant heroine navigating family expectations, career uncertainty and independence, supported by an important new friendship. Contemporary Brooklyn setting with strong visual and audiovisual potential. First book in a planned trilogy of interconnected standalone romances.

THE PITCH

After catching her boyfriend cheating during her semester abroad in New York, 23-year-old Alia decides to stay in Brooklyn for the summer rather than return to the carefully planned life her parents have mapped out for her. Unfortunately, staying means living in the same apartment building as her ex — while repeatedly crossing paths in the elevator with Zade, a charismatic and infuriating stranger who quickly gets under her skin. As Alia navigates this unfamiliar new stage of her life, an unexpected friendship with her new roommate becomes an important source of support, helping her find her footing, embrace the uncertainty around her, and begin to imagine a life beyond the one her parents have planned for her. Meanwhile, what begins with playful banter and undeniable chemistry with Zade develops into a slow-burning connection as Alia confronts the real reason she has been afraid to make her own choices. But with her visa running out, her career hanging in the balance, her parents pressuring her to return to Germany, and Zade preparing to leave on a long-planned journey, Alia must decide whether to choose the security of a predetermined future or risk building a life on her own terms.

Why this Book?

A compelling central mystery: Fawn's father—the beloved mayor who trained her forbidden magic—becomes increasingly suspicious, forcing her to question the person she trusts most.

A strong mystery-romantasy engine: hunted magic, unexplained disappearances, a secret organisation and the threat of becoming the Goddess's next victim drive the story beyond the romance.

A commercially appealing voice: witty banter and emotional warmth contrast with darker stakes and a growing sense of danger.

Key Selling Points

Series potential: the mythology, central mystery and larger magical conspiracy leave substantial room for future books and an invested readership.

A distinctive position in the romantasy market: combining the visual appeal and charm associated with cozy fantasy settings with the suspense, danger and emotional stakes of mystery-driven romantasy.

THE PITCH

An eternally autumn village. A stolen first kiss in a borrowed body. And a curse that was never really about love at all.

Fawn Miller has spent her entire life in Fuchsbuckel, a charming village trapped in perpetual autumn—and governed by a mysterious curse that seems to determine who will fall in love with whom each generation.

But Fawn has a secret of her own. She possesses a rare and nearly extinct form of soul magic that allows her to project herself into other people's bodies, a dangerous ability her father has secretly trained her to control.

Everything changes when Gwyndra, a sharp-tongued harpy, and Sawyer, a maddeningly charming drifter, arrive in Fuchsbuckel, each with a hidden agenda. When Fawn is caught spying while inhabiting someone else's body, her carefully controlled life spirals into chaos. Worse still, a magical accident leaves her trapped in Sawyer's body while he is forced into hers—resulting in an unforgettable first kiss neither of them actually gets to experience in their own bodies.

Then there's Patrick, Fawn's oldest friend and the boy everyone—including the curse—expects her to end up with. And the truth is far more complicated than simply choosing the wrong man: Fawn loves Patrick deeply. Just not in the same way she finds herself drawn to Sawyer. Defying the future laid out for her means risking not only the curse itself, but one of the most important relationships in her life.

As Fawn begins to question everything she has been taught about the curse, she uncovers something far more sinister beneath Fuchsbuckel's cozy surface: a hunted magical bloodline, unexplained disappearances, a shadowy organisation known as Aegis—and the terrifying possibility that the Goddess behind the village's destiny has chosen Fawn as her next victim.

At the centre of it all stands Fawn's father: the village mayor, the man who trained her to control her forbidden magic, and the person she loves and trusts most in the world. But as suspicion begins to close in around him, Fawn is forced to confront an impossible question:

How well does she really know her own father—and how much of her life has been built on secrets?

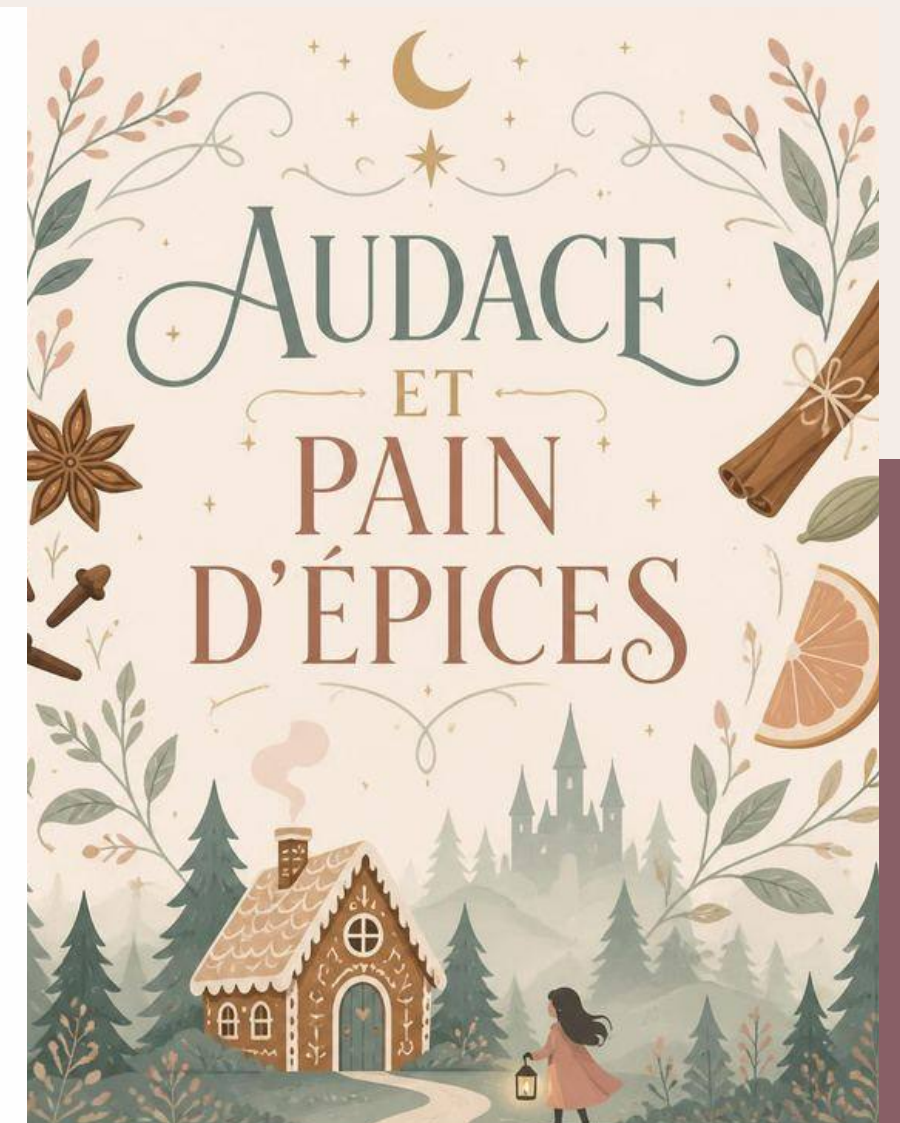

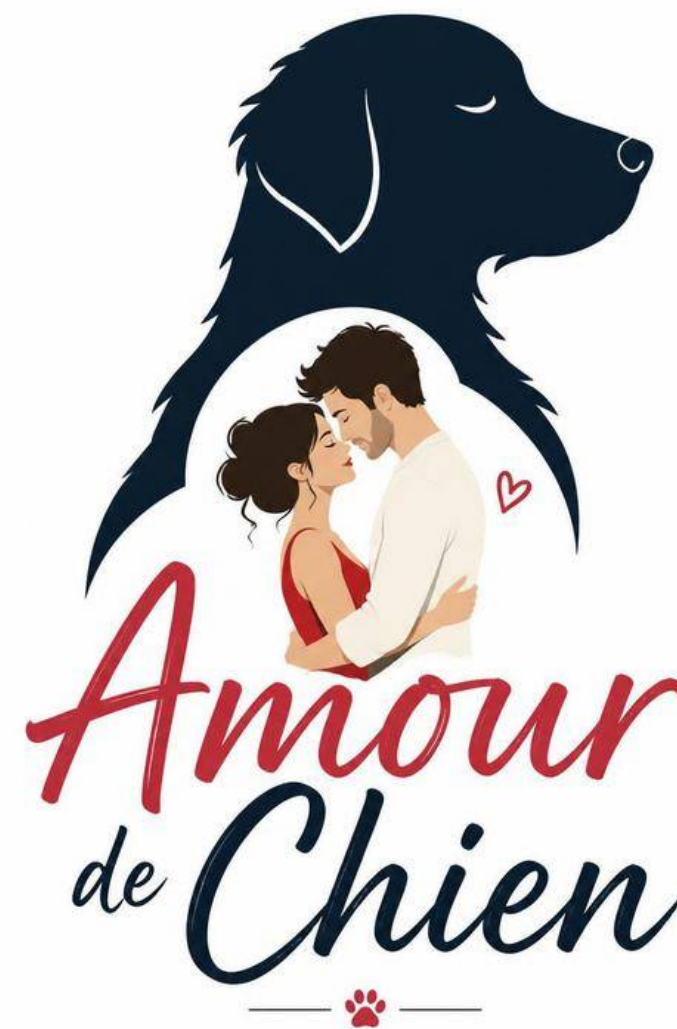

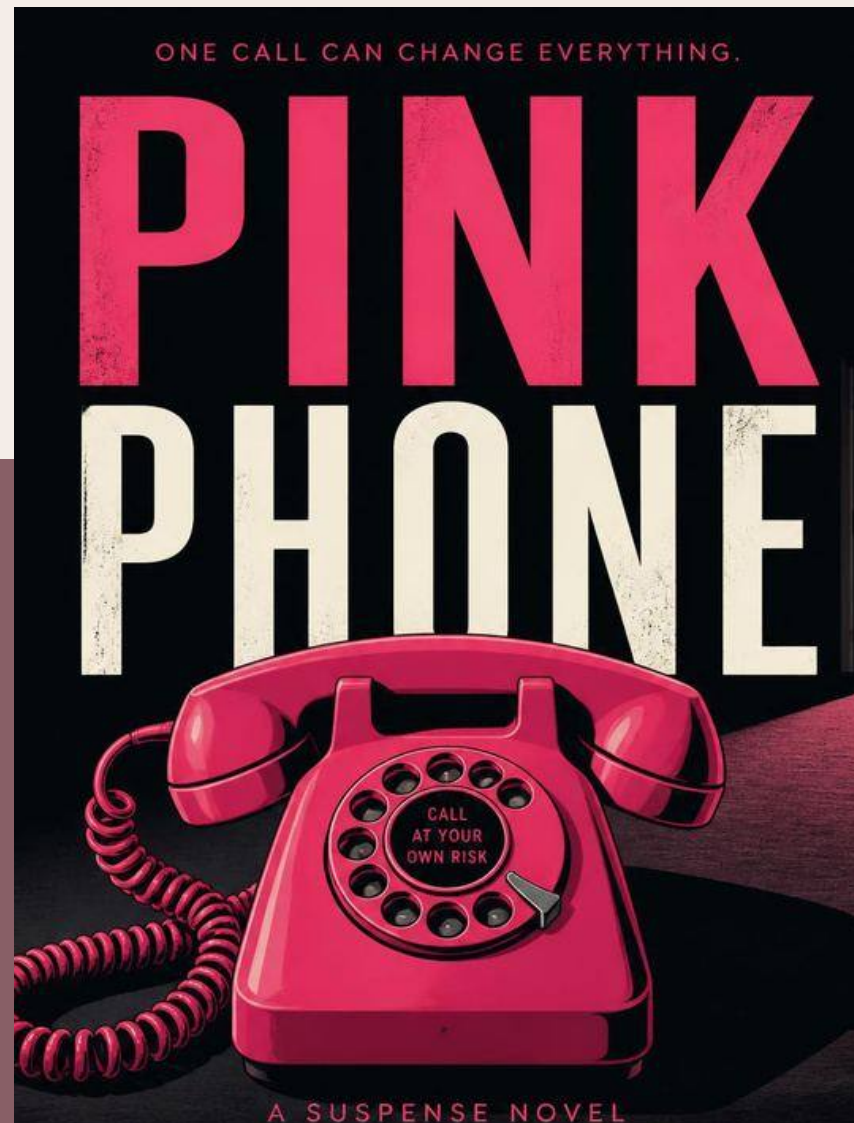

Because perhaps the curse was never designed to bring people together.

Perhaps it was designed to control them.

And if Fawn wants to survive, she may have to destroy the destiny that has shaped her entire life.

THE PITCH

She's survived centuries, outlived kingdoms, and learned never to get too attached — until a forbidden royal conspiracy, an unexpected found family, and one very inconvenient love story threaten to change everything. For three centuries, Lazare has lived under the identity of Elisabeth “Lazy” Lakewood, a reclusive watercolourist hiding the truth about who she really is: she is an Arcâme, a legendary living weapon capable of bringing its bearer back from the dead.

When Crown Prince Caïn asks Lazy to paint a secret portrait for the guard he loves, she is drawn into the royal court — and into the very expedition hunting the legendary Arcâme she has spent centuries hiding. Led by Caïn's younger brother Vesper and his devoted guard Solen, the expedition should be the perfect opportunity for Lazy to sabotage the hunt from within. Instead, she finds herself caught between two men who could expose her secret at any moment. Vesper is suspicious, ruthless and determined to stop the king from possessing an Arcâme. Solen is warm, protective and hiding secrets of his own. As danger, political intrigue and attraction collide, Lazy must decide how much of herself she is willing to reveal — and whether the three of them can build something together in a kingdom where love, freedom and power are all tightly controlled.

Funny, irreverent and emotionally resonant, Audace et Pain d'épices combines comic romantasy with political stakes, queer representation and a refreshingly unconventional romantic structure.

Good Night Stories for Rebel Girls meets You Are Awesome in an empowering collection of real-life stories that challenges the stereotypes girls still face today—and gives young readers the confidence to break them.

"You're a girl. Be more domestic."

"Girls don't make good leaders."

"Engineering isn't for girls."

We've all heard them. But what if the only thing that truly isn't for girls is believing those stereotypes?

Through 36 honest, relatable stories, young readers meet girls whose dreams, passions and ambitions were limited by outdated expectations—from sports and science to leadership, creativity and everyday life. Each story explores how a single stereotype shaped someone's experience before inviting readers to question, challenge and ultimately dismantle that belief.

Warm, accessible and deeply empowering, It's a Girl Thing: Breaking the Stereotypes! combines personal storytelling with practical reflection, encouraging children to think critically, embrace their individuality and believe that no dream is defined by gender.

A timely, conversation-starting book for families, classrooms and libraries that inspires the next generation to rewrite the rules.

A heartwarming middle-grade adventure about teamwork, empathy and discovering that our greatest strengths often lie in our differences.

Everyone calls Petryk "Hedgehog"—and for good reason. Stubborn, prickly and determined to prove himself, he dreams of becoming as brave and respected as his police officer father. When the principal asks him to captain his new school's marathon team, Petryk sees the perfect opportunity to prove what he's capable of. There's just one problem: he doesn't believe his teammates have what it takes to win.

As training begins, Petryk is forced to confront his own assumptions about the children around him. Each teammate brings unique talents, challenges and perspectives, and he slowly discovers that true leadership isn't about being the strongest—it's about learning to trust, listen and celebrate what makes every member of the team special.

Filled with humour, friendship and emotional warmth, The Unlikely Team is an inspiring story that encourages young readers to embrace diversity, overcome prejudice and discover the extraordinary power of inclusion.

Friendship isn't always easy—but it's the adventure that shapes who we become.

PANNA is a heartwarming contemporary trilogy following three very different girls—Sophia, Olya and Diana—whose lives become intertwined through a shared passion project: the @Panna blog. Each girl experiences the world differently, and each book tells the story from her own perspective, exploring the joys and challenges of growing up through a unique voice.

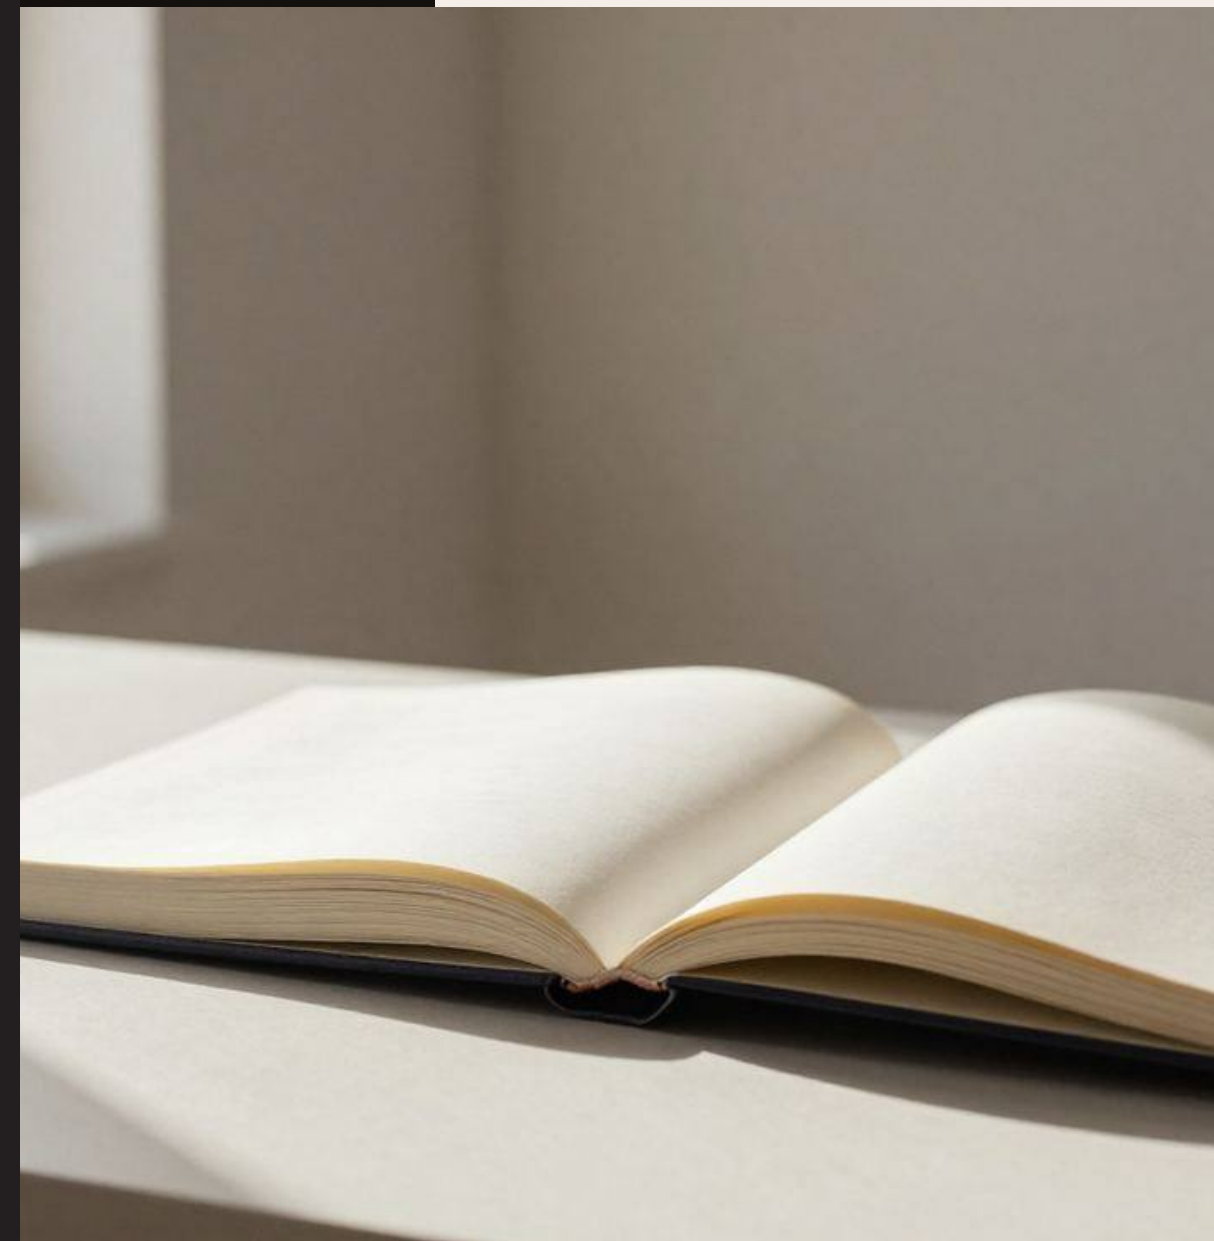

As the girls navigate first crushes, changing friendships, family relationships, school pressures and the search for their own identities, they discover that growing up isn't about having all the answers—it's about learning to support one another through every awkward, exciting and unforgettable first.

Warm, witty and emotionally authentic, PANNA is a celebration of friendship, self-discovery and the everyday moments that shape adolescence.
